Re: Medi Shower units

Birmingham Community Healthcare NHS Trust take a proactive approach to managing water hygiene on its sites, as such it is always looking to apply best practice to ensure the highest possible standards.

Shower are long established as a high risk item in respect to water hygiene and as such we have been undertaking a trial of the Medi Shower unit on our Moseley Hall hospital site during 2015. This was not as a reaction to positive sampling but as further reinforcement to our system of water management.

The product has been favourably received by staff, patients and the control of infection team and so far we have seen no drawbacks to using the product.

The colour coding of the inserts assist with staff awareness and engagement and is a clear visual indicator that servicing work has been undertaken.

We will continue with the trial the showers and following the initial response are looking to adopt this product as standard across the trusts sites where applicable.
